But the ball wasn't going through the net consistently. So last year, Wright got a call from former teammate Kris Joseph. Wright told Joseph that he was free to call any of his former teammates, and not just Kris. So Joseph got on the phone with someone else. "Just trying to motivate me," Wright said. "Kris and I are close. So, I let him call him too." On this day, Joseph called Morey. "(Morey) just said, 'You want to get you some easy buckets? So, you get open and I'll get you the bucket,'" Wright said. "So, I take some easy ones and he hits some open ones." And Wright hit 12 of them. Morey hit four, and Wright hit seven. "He's a great shooter," Wright said. But the real story is what Wright did when he wasn't shooting. He helped out on the defensive end, notching a pair of steals and an assist in the run-and-jump drill. Wright said he needed to be more aware defensively. "I was thinking too much when I was playing defense," Wright said. "I was reading them when they went to the ball." Asked why he didn't think about defense when he played defense, Wright said, "I just don't think about it. I was just trying to get a bucket. I don't really think about defense." Wright didn't even realize how much he had been out-of-the-game that he hadn't scored a point until after he left the arena. "(When you have) 38, 39 points, you just don't realize how many points you're getting," Wright said. "You're just kind of in awe."
