In general terms, this means the battery will last at least 10 hours on a full charge. While other iPad models may be on the way with a bigger screen, it seems for now the iPad size will stay the same. To clear up any confusion, the new iPad will have a 7.9 inch display. This means it will be smaller than the iPhone 3GS screen which is 8.9 inches. The big advantage over the iPhone 3GS screen is that the new screen resolution of the iPad will be 1024 by 768, which is the same resolution as the iPhone 3GS. As you know, the iPhone 3GS has a better resolution. The iPad will also have the same old 16:9 aspect ratio, which means it will have the same 4:3 ratio for movies, etc. Apple's new iPad will have a faster CPU (application processor), 256MB of RAM (a 30 percent increase), a 1GB hard drive, a CDMA cellular modem and a GPS chip. The 2GHz processor will be used to replace the slower 800MHz processor found on the original iPad. The front facing camera will also be upgraded to allow for faster video calls. The camera will also have a more advanced panoramic mode. There will be two models of the new iPad. One will have Wi-Fi only and the other will have both Wi-Fi and a cellular option. It is no surprise that the Wi-Fi only version will be $399 for the 16GB version and $499 for the 32GB version. The cellular option will be $629 for the 16GB model and $729 for the 32GB model. There will also be a CDMA version but it will be sold at the same price, so we don't know what it's going to be. One of the coolest features will be that the back light on the new iPad will be almost completely transparent allowing users to light up the screen as though it were on a reflective piece of paper. This will allow the iPad to be used under direct
