DVD/Vinyl that the lack of a rigorous methodological study weakened the scientific level of the studies included. Moreover, the authors suggest that there is a lack of studies concerning this topic in the Middle East. In recent years, social support has been used to predict cancer survival ([@B4], [@B19], [@B23]). Social support has been found to be an important and powerful health indicator ([@B24], [@B25]), and studies have shown that the social support system plays a significant role in the cancer patients' coping, improving the quality of life and increasing the likelihood of survival ([@B25]). By explaining the outcome of this study, it was revealed that social support is a predictor of breast cancer survival in the Iranian population. This is similar to studies conducted in developed countries ([@B5]--[@B9], [@B18]), with other predictors such as having insurance, having a partner and religious and spiritual beliefs as predictors of cancer survival. In several studies, family support was predicted by the patients' income ([@B5]--[@B9]). This is similar to the findings of other studies that support ([@B6], [@B7], [@B25]). However, in Iran, the results showed that the higher the income level of the family, the greater the likelihood of receiving social support.
